TORIES VOTE FOR A BLACK BRITAIN

Conference throws out resolution to curb immigrant flood

"It's high time we got our heads out of the sand and started speaking the truth about these incidents. This is what happens when Coloureds start congregating together." (Inspector Tony Ray of Reading Police following a riot by Blacks at a Reading fairground)

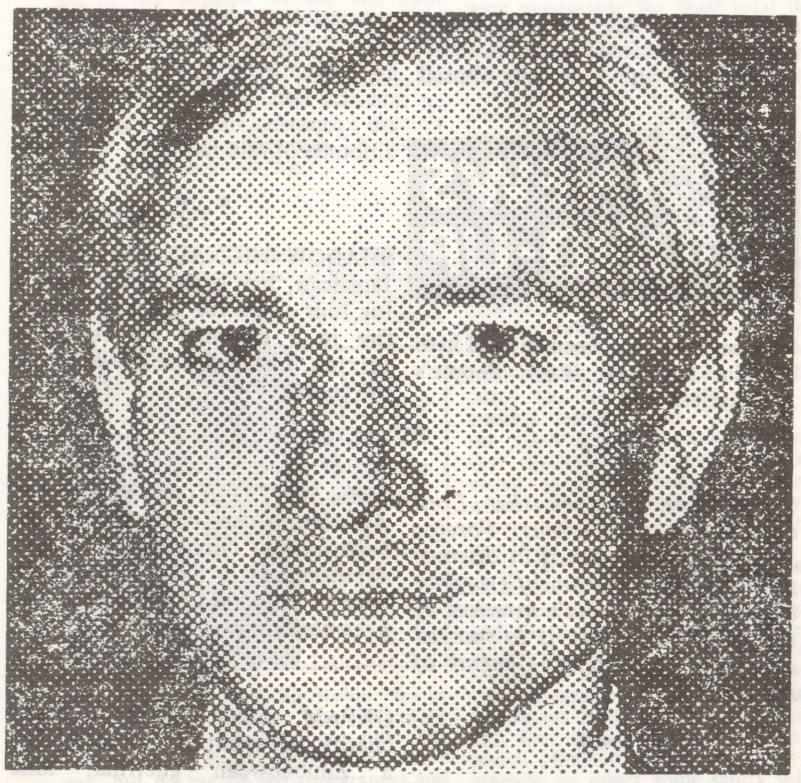
ANY MEMBER OF THE BRITISH ELECTORATE who has believed that the Tory Government under Mrs. Thatcher intends to grapple with Britain's immigration problem must surely have had their last hopes shattered after this year's Conservative party conference at Blackpool.

The conference voted overwhelmingly against a resolution tabled by Mr. Harvey Proctor, the MP for Billericay, which called for the stoppage of further immigration from the New Commonwealth and Pakistan, the repeal of existing 'race relations' laws which discriminate against native British people and a programme of voluntary assisted repatriation of immigrants now living in this country.

The resolution was in fact wholly inadequate in its scope. By making repatiration purely voluntary, it ensured that only a part – and probably not the biggest part – of Britain's present coloured population would be obliged to leave. It was a wet, insipid, watered down version of the policy that is really needed to cure Britain's festering race problem – a policy in which nothing less than the compulsory repatriation or resettlement of all coloured immigrants and their offspring will suffice.

But even this compromise proposal was too much for the Tory conference. One by one, the party leadership rose and spoke against it; all those comprising the conference platform hierarchy led the applause for speeches in opposition to the resolution; and in the end only about a hundred among those many thousands of delegates in the hall put their hands up in support of the resolution. This hundred or so were greeted with derisive laughter by the rest of the delegates.

The Tory Party conference of 1983 voted, in effected, for a black Britain – for that is the ultimate consequence of the party's failure now to vote to stop the creeping negrification of our country.



HARVEY PROCTOR
Received derisory support

AFRAID OF LOSING BLACK VOTES

In almost all of the speeches made in opposition to Mr. Proctor's resolution it was stressed how many black votes the party would lose if it adopted a policy of preventing further immigration and repatriating immigrants, even only on a voluntary basis. In other words, two things were demonstrated: (1) The coloured immigrant vote is now big enough to decide the result of British elections; (2) To today's Conservatives, this vote – and the momentary advantage in the party game that it is hoped it will give them – is more important a priority than the whole of Britain's future, the future of countless unborn generations of British people.

The result of this conference demonstrated, once and for all, the utter barrenness and rottenness of today's Tory Party. For years the party has been trying to kid the British people that it resolves to control immigration and tackle the race problem. Now we know – if we ever needed to know – that the Tories intend to do nothing. They intend Britain to continue degenerating into a multi-racial slum, with huge urban areas taken over by Blacks and Asians; a nation hope-

THE INEVITABLE CONSEQUENCE

We are not being unduly alarmist, nor are we exaggerating, when we say that Britain will eventually be populated by a black and brown majority if Tory, Labour, Liberal and SDP policies are allowed to prevail.

The non-white birthrate in Britain today is 112 per thousand as against a white birthrate of 59 per thousand, in other words the average black or Asian family is almost twice as large as the average white family.

Even if not another coloured immigrant entered Britain, and as long as only a tiny number leave, it is only a matter of time before the majority of people in the country are non-white. The simple statistics of fertility make this obvious.

But in fact, Blacks and Asians are continuing to pour in. Over 30,000 entered the country OFFICIALLY last year – and this number does not take into account ILLEGAL immigrants. Meanwhile white British people are LEAVING the country in great numbers.

The influx of Blacks and Asians and the exodus of Whites, together with the vastly higher birthrate of the coloured peoples, ensure a coloured take-over within a few generations. We may not live to see it, but it will be a curse that we bestow upon our descendants.

And in certain areas, such as Greater London, the West Midlands, Greater Manchester, Merseyside, Leicester and Bradford, this take-over will come much sooner. It could indeed come within the lifetime of many of those now living.

We have always known that this is what Labour, the Liberals and the SDP want. We now know that it is what the Tories want too.

WAR IN ULSTER

THE MASS ESCAPE of 38 armed IRA thugs from the "maximum-security" Maze Prison was an absolute disgrace, and one that emphasised yet again the feebleness of the Government's response to terrorism in Ulster.

Successive British Governments have consistently demonstrated that they have neither the courage nor the resolve to come to terms with the realities of the situation in Northern Ireland. The fact is that a war is going on in the Province; but British politicians refuse to face that fact and prefer to choose the soft option instead of taking the necessarily harsh methods that are required to quell terrorism.

By sending two such prime "wets" as Messrs. Prior and Scott to Northern Ireland Mrs. Thatcher has indicated either that she does not regard the situation there as serious, or that she believes that peace can only be achieved by compromisers. If the Government displays such a gutless attitude towards the IRA, it is hardly surprising that institutions like The Maze have come to resemble holiday camps where prisoners live a pampered existence and are apparently, and it seems literally, allowed to come and go much as they please.

If the Government has any intention of defeating the IRA, Prior and Scott should be sacked immediately and prisons in Ulster should be reconverted from the leisure centres that they have become, to the places of punishment that they are supposed to be. Failure to take such action will be an insult to the memory of the many soldiers, policemen and civilians who have died in Ulster fighting the war against terrorism.

DUPLICITOUS DUO

THE ELEVATION of Mr. Neil Kinnock to the leadership of the Labour party changes nothing; it simply means that the party is now led by a Glib Tongue instead of a Bumbling Geriatric.

What Britain badly needs is leadership, not waffling windbags. But Labour will not be able to provide such leadership under the inexperienced and accident-prone Kinnock and the pompous and vainglorious Roy Hattersley, especially since both these power-hungry men relied very much on duplicity and deceit in their fight for the leadership. The marriage will not last, which is perhaps fortunate; for a Labour Government led by this Duplicitous Duo would be a disaster for Britain, and would possibly be even more of a disaster than the Government led by Thatcher and Whitelaw!

The Kinnock-Hattersley alliance has been dubbed a "dream ticket". The thought of being governed by such people seems more like a nightmare. Let us hope that our people wake up and opt for British Nationalism long before such a calamity occurs.

The Common Market helps its friends

THE EUROPEAN PARLIAMENT is to pay huge sums of public money into the coffers of Britain's political parties to finance their election campaigns for next year's Euro-election. The Tories will get £3 million, Labour £1 million, the Liberals £300,000, and the SDP a sum that has yet to be calculated.

The EEC's own rules regarding these massive handouts have been unashamedly bent to comply with Establishment notions of fair play. For instance, the Liberals do not qualify for anything because they did not win any seats in the last Euro-election; but their Liberal colleagues on the Continent think that this places them at a disadvantage and have therefore "reallocated" the aforementioned sum for their use. Similarly, the SDP is not entitled to a single slice of the Euro-cake under the present rules because the party did not even exist when the last Euro-election was held; but no matter – Dr. Owen and his friends have been promised payment after the election, depending on the number of votes cast in their favour.

A further irony is that Labour should get anything at all, since the party's 1983 General Election manifesto specifically committed it to Britain's withdrawal from the EEC. However, everyone knows that that promise was a ploy aimed at persuading gullible anti-Marketeers to vote Labour, not a promise intended to be kept. Already, Labour's newly-elected leader, Neil Kinnock, has made noises which suggest that under his tutelage the party will renege on that particular pledge in double-quick time.

HOW FUNDS ARE SYPHONED OUT TO THE PARTIES WHICH FAVOUR BRITAIN IN EUROPE

INTOLERABLE

It is quite intolerable that money exacted from Britain's hard-pressed taxpayers should be used to further the interests of political parties that have done so much to attach the EEC millstone about our necks, and at such incalculable cost to our national independence, personal freedom and economic well-being. Squandering public money in this way reeks of corruption; it is alien to our British sense of fair play; it is downright dishonest; and it is yet another very good reason why Britain must extricate herself from the EEC morass without delay.

lessly divided against itself, along lines of race, religion, language, loyalty, culture and standards of behaviour; a nation producing from its schools an increasing number lacking in the aptitudes to make a go of it in British society or man our increasingly complex technological machine; a nation rent by all manner of new forms of violent crime, almost unknown in the days of its former racial homogeneity. This is the nation that the Tories – just as much as Labour and the parties of the so-called 'Alliance' – intend to bequeath to us.

It underlines that there is now one last hope for Britain to be saved and to recover. This hope lies in British Nationalism. Let all those who in recent years have deserted the Nationalist movement in the quest for a quicker, easier, more comfortable passage to political power by allying themselves with the 'establishment' parties now realise the error of their ways, and come back to help us make British Nationalism the force that is has the potential to become!

EEC meddles in British affairs

A THREE-MAN delegation from the European Parliament, led by a Danish Liberal MP, Mr. Neils Haagerup, recently visited Northern Ireland to "enquire into the political, economic and social affairs in the Province." Displaying all the wetness that typifies the British Government's handling of affairs in Ulster, a Northern Ireland Office spokesman meekly complained that " . . . the European Parliament has no business discussing the internal affairs of a member State." But despite this feeble reproof, the delegation was provided with a comprehensive briefing by the NIO and accompanied on its itinerary by Government officials. More robust was the response of Dr. Ian Paisley, who is a Euro-MP himself. He said that he and his supporters would completely ignore "these meddlers from Europe." Bravo Dr. Paisley! Would that a few politicians on this side of the St. George's Channel did likewise!

'DEMOCRACY' IN ACTION
Council defies people's wishes over name for block of flats

SIDNEY GODLEY, V.C.

A TYPICAL example of 'democracy' in action was provided by the recent decision of Tower Hamlets Borough Council in London to name a new block of council flats after left-wing riot hero Blair Peach. The vast majority of local tenants wanted instead to have the block named after Mr. Sidney Godley, a local man who won the VC at Mons in World War 1. The locals, however, were just ignored. Now the Council plans to have another block named after IRA terrorist Bobby Sands.
'Democracy', the will of the people', triumphs once again!

The plaques may be ordered from: Mr. L. Bearsford Walker, 44 Patterdale Close, Estover, Plymouth, Devon. They cost £15, incl. postage. All profits to party funds.

BLACK LAWYER MAKES A MONKEY OUT OF LEGAL SYSTEM

RONALD RICKCORD calls for the sacking of Rudy Narayan

DURING RECENT YEARS the British legal system, once the envy of the world and the exemplar upon which the jurisprudence in many other countries is based, has sadly degenerated and become an object of pity, if not contempt. That this is so is in large measure due to the inconsistency, not to say the incongruity, in the passing of sentences. Too often we hear of householders being sent to prison for not paying their rates or rents and motorcyclists being incarcerated for failing to wear crash helmets – and the like; while murderers, rapists and child-molesters frequently receive the utmost lenience from judges, and are sometimes actually allowed to go free. This disturbing trend is particularly prevalent when violent criminals happen to be black.

One such trial resulting in excessive lenience towards black thugs was the Terry May trial at the Old Bailey, about which I wrote at some length in this paper 18 months ago. Readers will not be unaware of a sequel to that trial which has demonstrated even further the favouritism given to Blacks and the depths to which our legal system has descended.

DISGRACEFUL

One of the defence lawyers in the Terry May trial was a certain Guyanese-born barrister named Rudy Narayan. Arising out of his disgraceful and unprofessional behaviour during and after the trial, Mr. Narayan was summoned to appear before the disciplinary tribunal of the Bar Council on the following charges:

1. That he issued a Press statement accusing the Attorney-General and Director of Public Prosecutions of being corrupt and incompetent, and of discriminating against "nigger lawyers" (his words).

2. That he described two prosecution lawyers as "liars" and "dirty rats".

3. That he shouted at one prosecution lawyer: "You were a thief and robber."

4. That without authorisation he read a confidential police notebook in the courtroom and continued to do so when ordered to stop.

5. That he called a police chief superintendent a "liar".

6. That he failed to observe the ethics and etiquette of the legal profession.

7. That he brought the profession of barrister into disrepute.

On the first charge Mr. Narayan, who is chairman of an organisation calling itself "Black Rights UK", was found not guilty on the grounds that at the time the press statement was issued he was wearing his "political hat" and was not acting as a barrister. This judgement seems quite extraordinary, and as Mr. Harry Ognall, QC, who prosecuted Narayan, put it: "If the publication of such a document is not serious professional misconduct in a member of the Bar it is difficult to see what is. A barrister cannot simply say that he was wearing his political hat and divest himself of the rules of propriety and decorum incumbent on him." Exactly so!

LENIENT TREATMENT

The Council found Narayan guilty on four of the remaining six charges, but although he has twice previously been the subject of Bar disciplinary proceedings, in 1974 and 1980, he was ordered to be suspended from practising as a barrister for only six weeks, though he is allowed to continue practising pending appeal! It is hard to imagine that a white lawyer who behaved so outrageously as Narayan would be treated so leniently.

Mr. Narayan's next escapade was to declare war on the police in South London. At a rowdy meeting of the Lambeth Community Police Liaison Group he demanded that black people should eject the police from the area. He said: "If it's necessary to fight a war of resistance to get them off our (sic) streets, then I will lead it." On this occasion the Bar Council decided to take no action against him, but I fail to understand why he was not brought before the courts charged with endeavouring to foment an insurrection.

DRUNK

Not content with the trouble he had already caused, the rebellious Mr. Narayan got himself charged with drunken driving in Railton Road, Brixton, after police had noticed his car swerving from side to side down the road. When arrested he refused to take a breath test or to provide a specimen and said to a police sergeant: "You're not dealing with some stupid local nigger now, you know." He then threatened another police sergeant by telling him: "Hawkins, you're finished. You're gone boy. I won't rest until I see you destroyed. Do you know how brilliant I am?"

For this episode Narayan received a mere £100 fine and was disqualified from driving for 18 months. Once again, it is difficult to believe that a white man would have been treated so favourably in similar circumstances. But that is not the end of the matter: the insolent Mr. Narayan has now been in contact with the Lord Chancellor and demanded that the magistrate who fined him be sacked!

RUDY NARAYAN
Should be disbarred

LOWERING STANDARDS

All these events may seem ludicrous, even comical; but they are symptomatic of the lowering of standards in the professions, a trend which is particularly tolerated where coloured people are concerned. Who can doubt that had Narayan been British born and bred he would long since have been disbarred? If the likes of Narayan are permitted to make monkeys out of high officials of State like the Attorney-General, Director of Public Prosecutions and judges, and are allowed to insult eminent lawyers and police officers with impunity, is it any wonder that the legal profession is regarded with contempt by many people, and that the more criminally inclined members of society consider the Law to be more of an inconvenience than a deterrent or punishment?

Nothing so perfectly demonstrates the soft attitude of the legal profession towards impertinent Blacks than the action of the Attorney-General, Sir Michael Havers, who, after having been grossly libelled in the most unsavoury manner by Narayan, subsequently agreed to attend a function held in the latter's chambers, complete with steel band, roti and curry, and Trinidad rum punch, in an attempt to "build bridges". Does Sir Michael have no sense of decorum?

If the legal profession has any sense of its ancient dignity it should have given Mr. Narayan his marching orders long ago. He would be much better employed practising the "Law" in a country like Zimbabwe. There, I'm sure, his undoubted talents would be greatly appreciated by Mr. Mugabe, a man whose novel sense of justice would provide a worthy challenge for so "brilliant" a "nigger lawyer" as Mr. Rudy Narayan calls himself.

CRIME; THE BRUTAL FIGURES

Of the 7,231 muggings reported in London in 1982, 63 per-cent were committed by people identified as non-white, according to Scotland Yard figures just released. The same figures reveal that 20 per-cent of muggers were identified as white, 3 per-cent as part of mixed gangs and 14 per-cent not known. These figures establish that of those muggers whose race was identified (86 per-cent of the whole) three quarters were non-white. And non-Whites are reported to comprise 1 in 13 of London's population. Think that one out!

TALKING POINTS

by FRONTIERSMAN

SUPERB ACHIEVEMENT

It makes a welcome change to be able to comment in this column about an event that makes one feel proud to be British. I refer to the superb achievement of Richard Noble, who has regained for Britain the world land speed record. Mr. Noble, following in the steps (or rather tracks) of such illustrious Britons as Henry Seagrave, Malcolm Campbell and John Cobb, set the new world record by driving his jet-propelled car, Thrust 2, at more than 633 mph across Black Rock Desert in Nevada. Great credit must also go to the designer of the car, John Ackroyd. Mr. Noble's motive for spending so many years and taking such great risks to regain the record for Britain is one that is unfortunately not very fashionable today. When asked why he did it he laconically replied: "Doing it for Britain's image was a major incentive." Noble by name as well as by nature.

ARCH WET

Mention of Mr. Gummer reminds me that he recently instructed his secretary that henceforth he is to be addressed as John "Selwyn" Gummer, an appellation that caused the droll Sir Robin Day to accuse him of having "pretensions to aristocracy." Whether or not Mr. Gummer has such pretensions I can't say, but he has all the appearances and attributes of being an arch wet. His flaccid face, double chin, effeminately large glasses and pontificating manner, coupled with his membership of the Church of England Synod – a body renowned for its permissiveness and liberalism – is not a good omen either for the Tories or for Britain. In appearance Gummer resembles a cross between the late Reginald Maudling and Edward Heath, with a dash of Jim Prior and Willie Whitelaw thrown in for good measure. Personally I much preferred Cecil Parkinson.

JOHN 'SELWYN' GUMMER
Would-be aristocrat

DEARTH OF POLICIES

This year's party political conferences were remarkable for their total dearth of policies: indeed, they seem to have been much more concerned with personalities than with policies. The Labour Conference from beginning to end was almost completely concerned with the leadership contest between Neil Kinnock and Roy Hattersley rather than with anything else. The Liberal Assembly had all the appearances of having been staged specifically for the rehabilitation of David Steel as the party's leader following the lengthy "Sabbatical" he granted himself for making such a mess of the Liberals' election campaign. The SDP's hopeful delegates at Salford expended most of their energy attempting to convince the nation that Dr. David Owen (alias Dr. Death) would be a more credible leader of the "Alliance" than the jaded Mr. Steel. And any policies that the Tories may have intended to unveil at their Blackpool Conference were entirely overshadowed by the salacious details of Mr. Cecil Parkinson's love life.

In fact I can't help feeling that the Parkinson affair was stage-managed to divert the attention of the party faithful and the general public away from the party's failure to do anything positive to restore law and order or to bring an end to immigration. Indeed, Parkinson's speech on Trade and Industry the very day that the immigration debate took place, kiboshed Harvey Proctor's brave attempt to inject some sanity into the party's thinking, as well as ensuring that the debate got minimal publicity. However, it must now be quite clear, even to the most unintelligent observer, that the Tory party is a multiracialist party if it is nothing else. As one Young Conservative pointed out during the debate, support for the Tories from the "ethnic minorities" in Leicester ensured that the party won two seats there they would otherwise have lost. And Mr. David Waddington, Minister of State for Home Affairs, actually had the nerve to say, "We are equal before the law." Who's he kidding? Tories evidently know on which side their bread is buttered!

TORY MOLE HUNT

The Young Conservatives' suggestion that the Tory party has been infiltrated by "right-wing extremists" seems to have been caused more by juvenile hysteria than factual evidence; but it has nevertheless succeeded in panicking the party's new chairman, John Gummer, into initiating a mole hunt to unearth would-be parliamentary candidates and applicants for staff positions in the party who are tainted with right-wing tendencies. My own opinion is that these YCs are themselves left-wing moles who have successfully managed to infiltrate the party. It is significant that their spokesman who presented the draft report on infiltration is a young man with an unpronounceable; unspellable and decidedly unBritish name. I feel that the YCs will soon become as great an embarrassment to the Tories as the Young Liberals were for the Liberal party some years ago when they came under the influence of the detestable Peter Hain. Time will tell.

A MAN TO WATCH

I hear that George Walden, the new MP for Buckingham, has Dr. Henry Kissinger's 22-year-old son, David, working for him as a "research assistant". Mr. Walden is evidently destined to go far. He is obviously a man to watch!

YOUR LETTERS

Sir,–Christine Yianni's article in the September issue of British Nationalist about statistics regarding black crime as interpreted by the Home Office reminded me of George Orwell's novel 1984.

It would appear that just as Winston Smith was employed in the Ministry of Truth to rewrite history, someone is similarly employed by the Home Office to find a suitable interpretation of the black crime statistics.

No doubt we in the British National Party are thought of as "Thought Criminals" by the politicians, but to the victims of these black crimes there will be no mistake about who the real criminals are.

NIGEL NICHOLL,

Sir,–In trying to decide the value to historical accuracy made by the lavishly produced TV series, Winds of War, I have come to the conclusion that the series is in fact nothing more than wind of the more unmentionable category; a sort of visual flatulence!

I decided to watch Part 1 of the series in the hope that its producers would depict the truthful build-up to World War II, rather than travel along the well rutted road of fictional tear-jerking that has been the hallmark of so many previous productions, such as Roots and Holocaust.

The whole production was nothing more than crude Jewish propaganda from start to finish.

Sir,–According to the Office of Population, Censuses and Surveys over 50 per cent of babies born in the UK to West Indian women who were born in the West Indies are illegitimate. But according to a leaflet entitled British Citizenship, which is published by the Home Office to explain the British Nationality Act 1981 that came into force at the beginning of this year, "Only a legitimate child can derive British citizenship from the father." (My emphasis). But the leaflet pointedly fails to mention whether British citizenship is granted to illegitimate children born to West Indian women who are resident here.

So what is the nationality of the illegitimate children born to the West Indian women referred to above?

HIGHLY SUCCESSFUL LONDON RALLY

"THE BEST EVENT YET!" This was the verdict of many British National Party members and supporters after the highly successful London rally on the 22nd October.

Last August the party suffered a setback in confidence as a result of a disappointing turn-out for a march in London and a successful major activity in the area was desired to restore that confidence. The indoor rally held in Victoria certainly provided this.

The rally was held under the most adverse conditions. It had proved impossible to book Caxton Hall, the location for previous London rallies, on any Saturday in October. The party therefore booked Conway Hall, in Red Lion Square, under an assumed name. This was necessary as the South Place Ethical Society, the hall owners, had refused to let it to Nationalist organisations after a threatened withdrawal of the Society's £4,000 annual grant by left-wing dominated Camden Council. Those attending the meeting were directed to a rendezvous point a short distance away, from where it was intended that they would be redirected to the rally.

STAN GOODWIN SPEAKS

Opponents of the BNP, however, found out about the BNP booking of Conway Hall and informed the owners, who promptly cancelled the booking only two days before the scheduled event. It was necessary to obtain an alternative hall quickly.

The route from the rendezvous point to the new hall, a hotel in Victoria, cut right across the route of a huge procession held at the same time on the same day by the Campaign for Nuclear Disarmament, the latter route having been blocked by police to normal pedestrian and vehicle traffic. As a result, many of those intending to be at the rally simply were unable to get to it in time. In addition, the many traffic diversions caused by the CND procession further held up traffic in other parts of London's West End and prevented people arriving at the rendezvous point. Add to this the stoppage of some trains due to rail dispute and every handicap was placed in the way of the rally attracting a maximum attendance.

In the final event between 250 and 300 were present in the hall. Messages that we have received since the rally indicate that as many as 100 more tried to get there and could not, for one or another reason. This indicates perhaps that to BNP members and supporters indoor rallies these days have a greater pull than marches – something that the party's activity organisers would do well to take into account.

The rally was impressively staged, with special lighting giving extra illumination to the speakers' area. The mass of Union Jacks and Dominion flags heightened the effect and the stirring martial music played on a recorder created just the right mood beforehand.

In the first part of the meeting short speeches were made by Ian Sloan from Liverpool, Tony Braithwaite from Yorkshire and Stan Goodwin from the West Midlands, and all were excellently delivered and received. Ian Sloan, making his debut as a speaker to a large audience, reported the development of the party on Merseyside and his speech, full of sincerity and good Liverpudlian humour, went down extremely well. Tony Braithwaite recounted his experiences when first seeing London as a youngster many years ago and then later being appalled by the changes in the early to middle 1970s, saying that this resolved him to become an active Nationalist. Stan Goodwin described how he had become involved with another political group after the big Nationalist split at the end of the 1970s but knew, from the first time he entered the hall on October 22nd, that he had made the right decision in joining the BNP, sensing immediately the atmosphere that he had missed for nearly 4 years and knowing that he was again among real friends.

A SHOT OF THE PLATFORM
The white screen on left has been erected for film show

The first part of the meeting was concluded by a showing of the film 'Survival Ethics', made by James Macintyre, which exposed the disastrous consequences of multi-racialism.

The second half was opened by a report from Glasgow and the Scottish region by Organiser Eric Brand, who had brought a team of 7 down to London for the event. Mr. Brand recounted how the BNP had gradually become the dominant Nationalist group in Scotland, with units now in Edinburgh and Aberdeen as well as Glasgow.

National Organiser Charles Parker followed with a speech which concentrated much on the decline in personal standards in modern Britain and which urged Nationalists to ensure that they give a lead in the raising of these standards.

The collection, conducted by Chairman of the meeting David Bruce, was then held and raised over £800.

The meeting was concluded by a 40-minute speech by John Tyndall in which he slammed the old parties for the barrenness of their policies and the absurd personal capers of their leaders, then went on to define the meaning of British Nationalism. The speech ended with a peroration stressing the immense potential of Britain and the British peoples if the flame of Nationalism could be ignited in this country. The meeting concluded in an atmosphere of tremendous enthusiasm.

Later there was an enjoyable social at which party members were able to meet and talk to the leadership in a relaxed atmosphere.

Verdict: a good day was had by all.

REGIONAL NEWS

LEICESTER

John Peacock, Leicester's energetic and forward-looking Branch Organiser, recently defeated attempts by the Leicestershire County Council to deny local BNP members the freedom of speech. A year ago the Council announced that it would ban the BNP from holding meetings on Council premises. Mr. Peacock immediately issued a statement saying that the ban would be put to the test, and then proved the point by holding a meeting in Burliegh College, Loughborough, a few weeks later. More recently the Branch held a public meeting in Castle Donington High School during a local by-election. About 40 people attended the meeting, which was chaired by Mr. Alan Gresham and was addressed by guest speaker Mr. Charles Parker and Mr. Peacock, who was the candidate. Despite the Council's efforts to muzzle the BNP and the minimal publicity given to the Party by the media, Mr. Peacock still managed to beat the Ecology candidate into fourth place in the poll.

CHELTENHAM & GLOUCESTER

Robert Rhodes, Branch Organiser of Cheltenham and Gloucester, recently wrote a letter to the Prime Minister asking whether the Chinese inhabitants of Hong Kong would be allowed to flood into Britain when the lease on the colony expires in 1997. Mr. Rhodes received a reply from the Hong Kong Department of the Foreign Office stating that: "Her Majesty's Government aims to reach a settlement on the matter which will be acceptable not only to the British and Chinese governments but also to the people of Hong Kong, whose views are being taken fully into account."

Mr. Rhodes comments: "We all know what that means!"

BROMLEY

It seems that circulation of British Nationalist and the Bromley branch newsletter, Counter Attack, in Bromley's enormous Downham Estate has resulted in the estate's residents being dubbed "Nazis" in a GLC report. Despite this attempt to smear local BNP supporters, which has been eagerly taken up by the local media, there is evidently widespread support for the BNP's policies both on the estate and elsewhere in the area. Branch Organiser Alfred Waite told the local press that support for the Party was confirmed by the volume of door-to-door newspaper sales on the estate and in other parts of Bromley. A local resident on the Downham Estate told British Nationalist that "one benefit that your paper sellers have had is to dissuade coloured people from coming to live on the estate because it now has the reputation of being a Nationalist stronghold. We already have too many of them here and we don't want any more."
